The global pandemic put a spotlight on virtual events and raised the question... "Do we still need physical events?"

— Executive, Federal Government

51% of people have attended 10 or more virtual events between March and August 2020.

So, what does the future look like for events?

We spoke with 135 business leaders in 31 countries to learn more.

"Since [April], we’ve only had virtual events, which have been much better quality in materials and lectures, probably because of less time spent on commuting and more time spent on events themselves."

— Yoichi Kitano, System Engineer, Net One Systems Co., Ltd.

"[Virtual events] made it possible to safely serve our population."

— Executive, Federal Government

Virtual events offer an interactive and engaging experience for attendees—at less cost.

"With so many working from home worldwide, we can have opportunities for additional training and information without the expense and safety concerns of in-person events."

— System Administrator, Educational Institution

"The cost to run a virtual event is about 75 percent less than running an actual event. This saves not only money, but it saves time. There are fewer travel costs... and people can join from anywhere."

— Project Manager, Small Business Computer Hardware Company

"Virtual events have helped us expand our audience and attendance."

— IT Architect, Small Business Computer Services Company

"With so many working from home worldwide, we can have opportunities for additional training and information without the expense and safety concerns of in-person events."

— System Administrator, Educational Institution

"The cost to run a virtual event is about 75 percent less than running an actual event. This saves not only money, but it saves time. There are fewer travel costs... and people can join from anywhere."

— Project Manager, Small Business Computer Hardware Company

"Virtual events have helped us expand our audience and attendance."

— IT Architect, Small Business Computer Services Company

Even when communities fully adjust to post-pandemic life, the data shows that people will actually prefer to attend virtual events.

"It’s clear that virtual events are here to stay. And actually... their future is brighter than you think."

87% believe when restrictions are lifted, events should be at least 50% virtual.

Virtual events are smarter, scalable, and safer.

Virtual events have helped us expand our audience and attendance.

— IT Architect, Small Business Computer Services Company

Looking to take your virtual events to the next level? Check out the All New Webex Events.

Source: TechValidate

© 2021 Cisco and/or its affiliates. All rights reserved. Cisco, the Cisco logo, Webex by Cisco, and Webex are trademarks or registered trademarks of Cisco and/or its affiliates in the U.S. and other countries. To view a list of Cisco trademarks, see the Trademarks page on the Cisco website. Third-party trademarks mentioned are the property of their respective owners. The use of the word “partner” does not imply a partnership relationship between Cisco and any other company. (2106R)